Programme Rationale

The MA in English Literature draws on the established research strengths of the Department of English and offers a wide range of modules taught by research specialists in the field. It allows for a broader coverage of literary genres and periods, and by so doing it complements other MA programmes in the Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences (such as the MA in London Studies). It enhances student learning by increasing module choice and aims to improve the graduate student experience through robust and effective academic management. This is an 'umbrella' programme, with a single point of entry leading to clearly defined pathways through the degree. Students who prefer a flexible route can choose modules from across the range of the curriculum, allowing them to consider the relationship between writings from a variety of historical periods and genres, and to write a supervised dissertation in an area of their choice. Students who prefer to specialize choose one of the defined pathways, gain an understanding of the movements, debates, and literary practices that shaped a particular period or genre, and write a supervised dissertation in a related area. The flexibility of the programme makes it appropriate for students who plan to go on to doctoral research, who want to develop and enhance their careers through the experience of research and the acquisition of transferable skills, or who wish to pursue their existing literary interests at a more advanced level. It provides extensive opportunities in the Department and Faculty for part-time study at Masters level.

Educational Aims of the Programme

- to introduce students to research methods and resources for the advanced study of literature, and to current theoretical and critical approaches to literature, in order to develop skills and knowledge appropriate to Master’s level
- to enable students to develop period-specific knowledge and skills in preparation for doctoral research through the provision of specialized and coherent pathways
- at the same time, through the provision of a flexible curriculum to enable students to gain an enhanced understanding of the study of literature relevant to a teaching career, and to improve their competence in transferable skills valued in the market place
Programme Title: MA in English Literature

- to build and enhance students’ independent research, presentation, and essay writing skills through seminar participation, module assessment, and the writing of a supervised research dissertation
- to extend access to high-quality MA teaching by putting in place appropriate and effective arrangements for part-time study

Learning Outcomes

The programme provides opportunities for students to develop and demonstrate knowledge and understanding, skills and other attributes in the following areas. The programme outcomes are referenced to the relevant QAA benchmark statement(s) (see above) and the Framework for Higher Education Qualifications in England, Wales and Northern Ireland (2008), and relate to the typical student. Additionally, the SEEC Credit Level Descriptors for Further and Higher Education 2003 and Queen Mary Statement of Graduate Attributes have been used as a guiding framework for curriculum design.

Knowledge and understanding of:

| A1 | The disciplinary conventions of English studies, and a critical awareness of theoretical debate in the field. |
| A2 | A range of scholarly approaches to the analysis and interpretation of literary texts, and an awareness of what is at stake in these differences of approach. |
| A3 | A particular subject area or field of literature (for example, a specific period, genre, or author) in greater depth than previously encountered in university study. |

Intellectual skills - able to:

| B1 | Apply research-based knowledge in line with current scholarship. |
| B2 | Sort complex written and/or visual evidence from a variety of original sources, and critically evaluate the reliability of these different sources of information. |
| B3 | Produce close as well as contextualized readings of a variety of texts and artefacts. |

Transferable skills - able to:

| C1 | Demonstrate self-direction and originality in tackling and solving problems, and act independently in planning and implementing tasks at a professional or equivalent level. |
| C2 | Construct clear and persuasive arguments sufficient to sustain appropriately complex answers to the problems encountered in the course of their studies. |
| C3 | Show advanced competence in the use of learning resources as aids to research and observe the requirements for the professional presentation of their work. |
| C4 | Demonstrate advanced proficiency in writing and speech, showing the ability to select an appropriate style and register, and to apply different forms of communication in a variety of cultural, professional, and workplace settings. |

Practical skills - able to:

| D1 | Recognise the ethical issues involved in the use and attribution of knowledge belonging to a global community of scholars. |
Programme Title: MA in English Literature

D2 Reflect self critically on their progress in both written and oral work, allowing for a continual improvement in knowledge and understanding, and the development of new skills at a high level.

D3 Exercise initiative and personal responsibility in decision making, while at the same time showing a readiness to act inclusively, and to work collaboratively, in a context of conflicting opinions.

Teaching, Learning and Assessment Strategies

Teaching will be provided in weekly seminars (usually with a maximum of twelve students). Seminars will be led by staff members with research qualifications and interests in the area. Students will be invited to discuss key issues, including theoretical approaches and interpretative procedures, and to assume an active role in shaping the direction and scope of the discussion. Participation will also be encouraged through seminar presentations, group research, and by the creation of a supportive, attentive, and considerate environment conducive to the exchange of ideas. Seminars will be supplemented by consultations with module convenors, dissertation supervisors, and academic advisers, which will include opportunities for one-to-one discussions of course content, and plans for written work. In addition there will be guided visits to libraries and other archives. Students will be expected to engage in private study in preparation for the seminars and in the production of essays and the dissertation. Each module is supported by a detailed reading list and by other learning materials housed in its on-line learning environment areas.

The dissertation supervisor will be allocated in the light of the student’s outline topic proposal, which is formulated during semester two in consultation with the adviser (with input as needed from module convenors). The supervisor will have expertise in the area of the student’s proposed topic, and will help the student refine and develop his or her plans. Supervision may include discussion of methodology, research resources, the scope of appropriate reading, the conduct and structure of the argument, the quality of submitted drafts and bibliographical procedures. Supervision will be provided in an initial, individual planning meeting, followed by a series of four one-to-one meetings. The dissertation is a maximum of 15,000 words.

The compulsory and elective modules are assessed by written essays of 4,000 words. Students will be able to formulate their own essay topics in consultation with the module convenor who will provide guidance on the planning and development of essays in one-to-one sessions during the second part of the semester. Compulsory credit-bearing modules incorporate an additional 1000-word written exercise to be submitted prior to the end of semester, to be assessed on a pass/fail basis.

Written reports on all written work (both essays and dissertations) will be provided by first and second markers. All written work will be returned to students individually by the module convenor or the supervisor in feedback sessions. In order to provide written and oral feedback in good time, essays will be returned with provisional marks before the numerical grade has been formally approved by the external examiners.

Programme Structure(s) and Requirements, Levels and Modules

In accordance with the Academic Credit Framework, candidates for the MA in English Literature take modules (including a Dissertation) with a total credit value of 180 at level 7.

There are seven pathways through the programme, each defined by one or more compulsory modules, as follows:

Pathway 1: English Literature
Compulsory modules: ESH7001 The Production of Texts in Context; ESH7046 Resources for Research; ESH7000 Dissertation; in addition students must choose one of the following non-credit bearing research skills modules, ESH7036 Researching Modern Culture; or ESH7045 London Panoramas: Research, Culture and the Long Eighteenth Century, or the 30 credit research skills module, ESH7064 The Material Text, 1300-1700.

This pathway offers a flexible route through the programme allowing students to pursue a wide range of topics. The compulsory module, ‘The Production of Texts in Context’, provides an advanced understanding of the material and social conditions in which texts are produced, disseminated, and read by investigating a range of case studies. It also provides students with a sound historical and conceptual preparation for the study of literary texts at postgraduate level. Students select three optional modules (two if they choose ESH7064 The Material Text, 1300-1700 as their research skills option) from the whole range of modules offered by the Department and complete a dissertation on an approved topic of their choice. Research training is provided by the ‘Resources for Research’ module.

Part-time students: first year students take ESH7001 The Production of Texts in Context and ESH7046 Resources for Research. In addition students take a research skills module, normally according to their individual area of interest. They may either take one of the two zero credit modules ESH7036 Researching Modern Culture; ESH7045 London Panoramas: Research, Culture and the

Long Eighteenth Century, or the 30 credit research skills module, ESH7064 The Material Text, 1300-1700. If they choose ESH7064 they will take this in their second year. In addition first year part-time students take one elective module in semester 2. Second year part-time students take two elective modules plus the dissertation (unless they choose ESH7064 as their research skills module, in which case they take this in the second year, plus one elective module).

Pathway 2: Early Modern Studies, 1300-1700
Compulsory modules: ESH7063 Writing in the Pre-Modern World; ESH7064 The Material Text, 1300-1700; ESH7000 Dissertation.
This pathway provides students the opportunity to explore the vibrant literary and documentary culture that existed in Europe from 1300-1700. The linked compulsory modules, 'Writing in the Pre-Modern World' and 'The Material Text, 1300-1700', introduce students to different methodological approaches to late medieval and Early Modern studies - including the historiography of the period, the importance of national contexts and traditions, the production and dissemination of manuscripts, the impact of print culture, the theory of iconography, and the development of scientific practice – and to practical encounters and skills for reading and identifying scripts, and for understanding manuscripts in different material formats (e.g. codex, roll), the scribe and scribal publication, the printed book, the editor, and the letter, among other topics, before testing those skills against particular texts. When possible, students will complement their study of edited texts encountered in 'Writing in the Pre-Modern World' with manuscript or early printed copies of those texts, which will enable them to apply the archival skills they acquire in 'The Material Text, 1300-1700' to the works they study in 'Writing in the Pre-Modern World'. Students also select two optional modules (one of which may be from outside the pathway), and complete a dissertation on an approved topic of their choice. Part-time students: first year students take one of the two compulsory modules (ESH7063 Writing in the Pre-Modern World and ESH7064 The Material Text, 1300-1700) and one optional module; second-year students take the other compulsory module and one optional module, plus the dissertation.

Pathway 3: Eighteenth-Century Literature and Romanticism
Compulsory modules: ESH7014 Ideas and Metaphors; ESH7045 London Panoramas; ESH7046 Resources for Research; ESH7000 Dissertation.
This pathway takes a truly interdisciplinary approach, and explores the history of genres, philosophy, politics, history, and visual culture, amongst other topics. The compulsory module, ‘Ideas and Metaphors’, offers a rigorous grounding in the themes, methods, arguments, and contexts needed to understand and interpret eighteenth-century and Romantic literature. Through focused discussion of one or two ideas or metaphors that characterize and structure the literature and thought of the period, students will assess the use and understanding of various terms such as ‘wit’, ‘candour’, ‘commerce’ and ‘sublimity’, looking carefully at their shifting meanings, contested values, and historical development, as well as at their representation in literary and non-literary writing. Students select three optional modules from a range of choices (one of which may be from outside the pathway), and complete a dissertation on an approved topic of their choice. Research training is provided by the period specific ‘London Panoramas’ and the general ‘Resources for Research’.
Part-time students: first year students take ESH7014 Ideas and Metaphors, ESH7045 London Panoramas, ESH7046 Resources for Research; and one elective module in semester 2; second year students take two elective modules and the dissertation.

Pathway 4: Victorian Literature
Compulsory modules: ESH7024 Victorian Voices; ESH7046 Resources for Research; ESH7000 Dissertation; in addition students must take the non-credit bearing research skills module ESH7045 London Panoramas: Research, Culture and the Long Eighteenth Century. This pathway provides an opportunity to explore a wide range of literature written in Britain between 1832 and 1900. The compulsory module, ‘Victorian Voices’, introduces students to a range of Victorian literary representations of identity. The module draws on canonical and non-canonical poetry and prose to explore ways of expressing core aspects of self while also considering the implications of audience and contexts. Students select three optional modules (one of which may be from outside the pathway), and complete a dissertation on an approved topic of their choice. Research training is provided by the ‘Resources for Research’ module.
Part-time students: first year students take ESH7024 Victorian Voices, ESH7046 Resources for Research, ESH7045 London Panoramas and one elective module in semester 2; second year students take two elective modules and the dissertation.

Pathway 5: Writing in the Modern Age
Compulsory modules: ESH7034 Modernism and After; ESH7046 Resources for Research; ESH7036 Researching Modern Culture; ESH7000 Dissertation
This pathway offers a historically wide-ranging, theoretically rigorous, and generically diverse grounding in twentieth-century literary culture. The compulsory module, ‘Modernism and After’, examines the key terms ‘modernity’ and ‘modernism’ from conceptual, aesthetic, and historical perspectives, while also exploring the relation of modernist writing to postcoloniality and to postwar literature. Students engage with a variety of literary and non-literary modes, encompassing narrative fiction, poetry, and critical theory. Students select three optional modules (one of which may be from outside the pathway), and complete a dissertation on an approved topic of their choice. Research training is provided by the period-specific ‘Researching Modern Culture’ and the general ‘Resources for Research’.

Part-time students: first year students take ESH7034 Modernism and After; ESH7046 Resources for Research; ESH7036 Researching Modern Culture; and one elective module in semester 2; second year students take two elective modules and the dissertation.

Pathway 6: Contemporary Writing

Compulsory Modules: ESH7023 Writing and the Present; ESH7046 Resources for Research; ESH7036 Researching Modern Culture; ESH7000 Dissertation

This pathway brings together a variety of genres and critical approaches to contemporary literature, offering the opportunity to explore fiction, poetry, and life writing, as well as debates in cultural theory and philosophy about the very nature and periodization of contemporaneity. The compulsory module, ‘Writing and the Present’, focuses on notions of ‘writing’ and the ‘present’ in relation to broad contemporary debates about the historical present, the nature of time, and the difficulties of periodization. Special attention is devoted to questions of technology, innovation, and social change that bring into question the category of writing itself, explore its role in current theoretical debates, its place in contemporary philosophy, and its transformations in the context of digital culture. Students select three optional modules (one of which may be from outside the pathway), and complete a dissertation on an approved topic of their choice. Research training is provided by the period specific ‘Researching Modern Culture’ and the general ‘Resources for Research’.

Part-time students: first year students take ESH7023 Writing and the Present; ESH7046 Resources for Research; ESH7036 Researching Modern Culture; and one elective module in semester 2; second year students take two elective modules and the dissertation.

Pathway 7: Postcolonial and Global Literatures

Compulsory modules: ESH7027 Peripheral Modernities; ESH7046 Resources for Research; ESH7036 Researching Modern Culture; ESH7000 Dissertation

This pathway explores writing from the classic to the contemporary, in English and in translation, that reflects on questions of global relatedness and colonial power. The compulsory module ‘Peripheral Modernities’ offers a thorough grounding in concepts of modernity, globalisation, and culture as viewed from the global peripheries. The module asks students to consider how we should theorise and understand these peripheries. Students select three optional modules (one of which may be from outside the pathway), and complete a dissertation on an approved topic of their choice. Research training is provided by the period specific ‘Researching Modern Culture’ and the general ‘Resources for Research’.

Part-time students: first year students take ESH7027 Peripheral Modernities; ESH7046 Resources for Research; ESH7036 Researching Modern Culture; and one elective module in semester 2; second year students take two elective modules and the dissertation.

The list of elective modules expands and changes as new modules are proposed or amended and approved through the Queen Mary Quality Assurance processes. Students may choose up to a maximum of 30 credits of cognate elective modules offered by Schools in the Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences (subject to approval by their adviser) and from cognate intercollegiate elective modules offered by Colleges of the University of London (subject to approval by their adviser and the Head of the Department of English).

Criteria for Admission to the Programme

Most applicants will have an undergraduate degree with 2.1 or higher honours (or overseas equivalent) in English or a related field. The typical offer will be 2.1 degree or overseas equivalent. Promising applicants who do not meet the formal academic criteria but who possess relevant credentials and who can demonstrate their ability to produce written work at Masters level will also be considered. Applicants may be invited to interview or asked to submit examples of written and/or creative work. We welcome applications from mature and non-traditional students. This is usually to help us assess that the programme you have applied for is best-suited to your academic background.

All applicants to QMUL must show they meet a minimum academic English language standard for admission and to be successful on the course, to the indicated levels for the area of study. While you may not need to provide an official English language qualification, you need to provide evidence of sufficient English language ability in line with the IELTS requirements for the course to which you are applying. Please check the programme English language entry requirements on our website for further information on the English language levels required before applying. If you have not achieved the required English language level yet, you may be eligible to take a Pre-sessional English course, or continue to take English language tests in your country to reach the level needed.

Quality Assurance Mechanism
Include details of: SSLC meetings, student feedback mechanisms, personal tutor arrangements, programme induction, programme review and monitoring.

Student-Staff Liaison Committee and student feedback:
MA students have two representatives on the department’s Student-Staff Liaison Committee, which is chaired by the Head of English, where they are able to raise questions and concerns about aspects of programme management. Current MA students were involved at an early stage in the development of this programme and their comments were taken into account when defining the pathways and programme title. All modules are evaluated by written student questionnaires, which are monitored by the Head of English. Convenors are required to respond to student feedback in their module reviews.

Advisers and induction:
Students will attend the School’s induction programme for Master’s students. This will include a pathway-specific induction with the convenor, a one-to-one meeting with the student’s adviser to discuss the student’s choice of options. Students will be assigned to their advisers at induction. They will meet at the beginning of each semester to discuss practical and academic issues (including dissertation plans) to set goals. Other meetings will be arranged for week 6 (to discuss module essay plans). A record of these meetings will be kept in the student's file.

Programme management:
The Programme is managed by a Programmes Committee, chaired by the Director of Graduate Taught Programmes, and supported by a member of the School of English and Drama's administrative staff. The membership includes the pathway convenors and the Chair of the Postgraduate Subject Examination Board. It reports to the Department Board.

The Programmes Committee has overall responsibility for:
- ensuring the academic coherence and quality of the programme, within the framework of the Academic Regulations
- organizing the timetable and considering proposals for new pathways and modules, and other planning initiatives
- monitoring recruitment and resources
- devising action plans in response to feedback from student module evaluations and the PTES
- coordinating examination procedures for the programme
- ensuring that the programme is publicized effectively, through the School’s website, through the postgraduate prospectus, and through other printed publicity materials and promotional activities
- overseeing annual module review in the light of external examiners’ reports
- contributing to the Annual Review of Postgraduate Programmes

The pathway convenors have responsibility for:
- allocating dissertation supervisors to students taking the pathway
- assisting the Director of Postgraduate Taught Programmes/PG SEB Chair in organizing the assessment procedures for the pathway, advising on the allocation of first and second markers for assessed work, and where relevant responding to external examiners’ reports

Programme-specific Assessment Regulations (if applicable)
In the case of programmes that deviate / do not comply with the Academic Regulations further information regarding the nature of any difference and/or deviation should be stipulated in detail.

Not applicable.

Employers Links
Please provide details of any links with employers e.g.

- Details of advisory panels that include current or potential employers;
- Organisations that regularly employ graduates from this programme and the roles that graduates undertake.
- Student prizes donated by organisations that may offer employment to graduates from this programme.

If there are no links with employers consider the learning outcomes and transferable skills and explain how these might be used to inform employers about the qualities and skills a graduate from this programme might be expected to have.

The MA in English Literature provides a grounding in research methodologies and practices for students who intended to progress to doctoral work, an enhanced understanding of the study of literature relevant to students who intended to follow a teaching career, and improved competence in transferable skills valued more generally in the market place, including the analysis of complex evidence, the oral and written presentation of arguments and information, and effective time-management. Employer feedback has particularly valued the research skills and high level of critical thinking acquired by graduates from the MA and the contribution these make to the problem-solving abilities required of those who work at senior levels in complex organizations.
